Brief Introduction

The origin of golf is widely believed to be a game among Scottish shepherds in the 15th century. Later, it was introduced to imperial palace and became a game of noblemen. Nowadays, golf has been a multi-functional sport of health-keeping, leisure, recreation, and social intercourse.

Golfers enter the green golf course, roam between the blue sky and green lawn and enjoy the long-lasting charm of the game.

With the policy of reform and opening up to the outside world, golf has been becoming more and more popular in China since 1980s. Up to now, China has more than 200 golf clubs after over 20 years' rapid development.

Most of courses are constructed in coastal areas, provincial capitals and famous tourism cities with excellent conditions for golf exercise, such as pleasant weather, beautiful scenery, and convenient transportation. These courses are in line with international norms in terms of site choosing, range design, ground maintaining, lawn implantation and service facilities and are capable of holding large-scale international games. Besides, many courses have their own unique features. For example, some are located in national tourism scenic areas surrounded by hills and sea with charming sceneries; others are near holiday resorts with beautiful and quiet environment, bringing people pastoral life. Meanwhile, all these golf courses have comfortable star-rated hotels and bars, where customers may feel carefree and relaxed and mold their temperament.

Golf in China has a promising future and is attracting more concerns of friends from all over the world. Guide to China's Golf Courses gives a comprehensive and detailed introduction to all golf courses in China. We hope it can provide some help for those who would come to China to play golf.
